

What many attorneys don't realize is that outsourced litigation printing expenses are often recoverable and may be billed back to the insurance company.

Recover eligible printing expenses. Optimize productivity.

When litigation matters require large-scale document production, trial exhibits, medical records, deposition materials, or discovery sets, many firms handle printing internally.

What many attorneys don't realize is that, depending on the carrier and applicable billing guidelines, outsourced litigation printing expenses are often recoverable and may be billed back to the insurance company. But internal printing costs typically are not.

By partnering with Avalon for litigation printing and document production, your firm may be able to recover eligible printing expenses while reducing the burden on internal staff and equipment.

Why outsource printing to Avalon?

- Potential cost recovery – Many insurance carriers allow reimbursement of third-party litigation support expenses, including printing and document production services, when properly documented and approved under applicable guidelines.
- Preserve firm profitability – In-house printing consumes staff time, equipment resources, toner, paper, maintenance, and administrative overhead: Costs that are often absorbed by the firm rather than recovered.
- Fast turnaround – Whether you need a small production set or thousands of pages prepared under tight deadlines, Avalon can scale to meet your needs.
- Professional litigation support – We provide high-quality document production services designed to support the demands of litigation, discovery, and trial preparation
